Octogenarian Torres recalls horse-drawn pumper

By ARTHUR SMITH

Octogenarian Vincent Torres was the youngest of the nine children of the late Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Torres, and is the only surviving member of that family of three daughters and six sons. Now nearing age 83, he resides in retirement with his wife, the former Maye Esther Havens of Vancleave, at 119 Dantzler St. in Moss Point in a home that he built very much with his own hands and the help of a friend, Jordan Rollins, a skilled ship carpenter of McInnes Bayou.

Torres retired in 1958 after 45 years as a beater engineer at International Paper Co. and during most of that time he was the unpaid chief operating and maintenance engineer of Moss Point's early fire engines. He is still a member of the Volunteer Fire Company, and recalls having tinkered with the first horse-drawn pumper, and some better equipment that followed until the company became professionalized and modern.

Torres' father and brothers were members of Moss Point's closely knit but never formally organized steam tug boat fraternity, and he is the only one who didn't become a master or an engineer. When diesel-powered craft began to appear on the river they pushed the saucy, wood-fired steam tugs into obscurity and nostalgic memories. Their work was mostly on the river where the sawmills were located, and they nudged and pushed cargo schooners from dock to dock, and went upstream regularly to tow down pens and rafts of logs to the many storage lakes of the mills. The logs were cut from virgin pines growing on lands drained by the Pascagoula River.

These were the smaller tugs that rarely chuffed out of the Escatawpa River and upstream on the Pascagoula. Larger and more powerful tugs met incoming schooners at Horn Island Pass and moored them at sawmill docks or left them at anchor in Middle Fleet south of the island. They also towed lumber-laden barges to the fleet (there have been as many as 30 anchored there) in the early decades of this century and to ships docked at Gulfport. This latter irritated compilers of Pascagoula Port statistics because the export tonnage was credited to Gulfport and not to the Port of Pascagoula.

Antonio Torres, the paternal head of the Torres family, was a native of Spain. After graduating from the University of Barcelona, he emigrated to this country, living for a while in New York and then New Orleans, where 10 years later he married the former Isabel Gavinge in 1870. The family moved to Moss Point and lived in a house facing Torres Street and running back to Denny Lake where the children grew up. Capt. Torres was master of the tugs Albert B., Gladys, and others.

In time the three girls married and moved away, but five of the boys followed their father on the river. Tony, the eldest, was longtime master of the seagoing tugs Laura and Bessie H. Louis was engineer on the Eva; Joseph was on the Laura and Kimball, also sea-going, as engineer; John and Miguel had similar jobs on the big Eran Dantzler and the smaller Rosalie. The latter was primarily a river tug, owned by Capt. W. P. Dailey, onetime a city alderman.

The smaller tugs which shunted schooners and lumber barges around the river and brought down logs, usually tied up at wharves stretching from the site of Moss Point's present city hall to the curve of the road opposite the Old Robinson mill site. The seagoing tugs usually tied up at Dantzler's mill more often in Scranton. Captains of these powerful boats somehow knew when a steamer or schooner would appear off Horn Island Pass, and would steam out there for the competitive job of towing one in. Sometimes the tugs drifted for hours waiting for a sail or smoke to appear over the horizon.

Kids who played around the wharves in Moss Point knew the name of every tug that docked there, Vincent Torres recalls. They also knew the tones of their whistles, and the women welcomed them aboard to swim raw off the fantails when the tugs tied up in the summer. The kids also knew that the Victor was the fastest and the Pic the smallest, and that the Pic carried a powerful pump and dropped her tow wherever to rush to a sawmill or lumber pile on fire.

When the sawmill industry began to wane and diesel-powered tugs operated ports, some of the Torres men were on board as officers. At least two signed up on cargo steamers. Joseph was an engineer on a tanker that evaded submarine patrols during World War II. Miguel, the last to die, was captain on a Mississippi River passenger ferry boat.

The river tugs carried a crew of three — captain, engineer and a fireman. The latter, usually a black man, doubled as a deck hand, and the more experienced could stand watch in the engine room, whenever the engineer wanted to snooze on the fantail during the slow towing of rafted logs. Foremen always reported early to get up steam for the tug to shove off for the day which usually ended in the afternoon.

The big seagoing tugs carried a larger crew including a mate and a second engineer for their frequent intercoastal voyages. Officers' quarters were on the second deck behind the pilot house, and firemen and deck hands remained below. There was a galley, equipped with a Shipmate stove of pleasant memory, on which a cook prepared filling and tasty meals, Torres was told by his brothers.

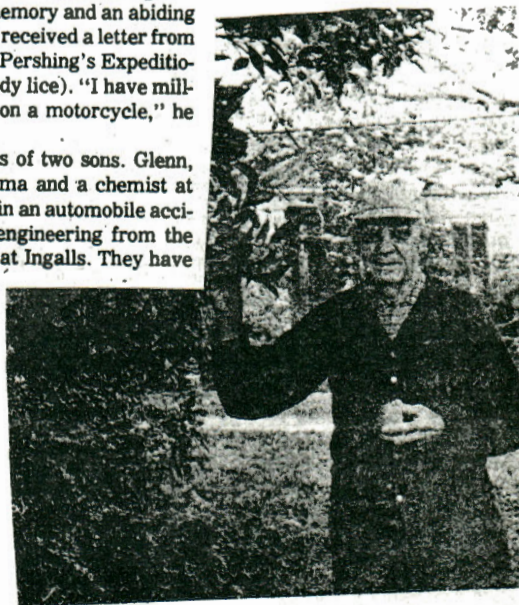

Vincent recalled other members of the tug boat fraternity who were identified with river and community life when Moss Point knew the whine of more than a dozen sawmills and planing mills and was the center of lumber manufacturing and exporting of states of the Gulf. There were Capt. Henry Coulson of the Victor, and his brother Tucker, engineer on the Pic. Tucker later boarded a seagoing cargo freighter as chief engineer. Also the Martin brothers, Henry and Douglas, and the Angelos, Joe and George, who were tugboat engineers and members of the Angelo family which built schooners and smaller craft at their yard on a site where the James Walker Marine yard now operates.

Others prominent in the fraternity were Capt. W. P. Dailey, owner of several small tugs; Capt. Nick Broadway, engineers Gordon Broome, Andrew Jackson and Henry Irving. The latter owned the Toiler, the tug that pulled the first load of slabs to the mill of the Southern Paper Company for its first batch of pulp.

They were an independent and often frolicking group — those tug boat men. All had stood examinations and were licensed by a U. S. agency, and unlike most workers of the period, they were not beholden to the lumber interests or boat owners. Before Moss Point was incorporated as a city in 1901, they refused to work the roads or pay a commutation tax and that carried over into the city, until a mayor said the was no validity to their claim that they worked on waterways and not at all on streets.

Before Vincent Torres began helping IPCO to make paper, he was a clerk in the Moss Point post office. In high school he was the dependable baseball pitcher and afterwards he developed a vicious "drop" when he twirled against neighbor teams. Torres is possessed of a vivid memory and an abiding sense of humor. A friend recalls having received a letter from him in France while with Gen. John J. Pershing's Expeditionary Forces complaining of cooties (body lice). "I have millions scurrying around or a single one on a motorcycle," he wrote.

Mr. and Mrs. Torres are the parents of two sons. Glenn, a graduate of the University of Alabama and a chemist at the International Paper Co., was killed in an automobile accident in 1970; Charles, a graduate in engineering from the University of Mississippi, is employed at Ingalls. They have six grandchildren.

Dear Vincent:

Here is a print of a story I wrote in 1967 after talking with you.

I would like to rewrite it, bringing it up to date with corrections, additions and anything that should be included.

On a separate sheet give this information:

Are you the only surviving member of the remarkable Torres family?

I was told that Miguel had died. About when?

I think you told me that your father was a native of Barcelona, Spain and a graduate in engineering there. When did he come to this country? To Moss Point or to some other port before coming here.

Was your mother also of Spain? What was her first name? Where were your parents married?

You and Maye Ester Haven, had two sons, I recall. One died in an accident several years ago. What are their names, and where does your surviving son now live? Is he an engineer?

In reading the names of the tugboat men mentioned in the article, you may be reminded of any that could be included. I am not interested here about the tugs that tied up in Pascagoula or the men who were aboard them, unless from Moss Point.

Don't bother about the composition of your reply or the order in which you give the information.

Return the print with your reply, but don't try to correct anything on it. Note the errors in your reply, if there are any important.

Best wishes, and good luck.

Thank you, Renee. Sounds like a very worthwhile project for you to pursue on behalf of the library. Please keep me informed, or possibly we could meet with Etienne in the near future. I appreciate your willingness to work on this. Additionally, I would like to schedule a time for you to take me around the library and show me the important works that we have here; is there an existing listing or inventory available? Is there some idea of its value? I know there is an effort underway to determine the value of art in all of JGRS branches...would you say that most of the valuable art is located here?

Thanks again,

Lori

Dear Lori,

Here is the report on our meeting. Like I said in the attachment, I have notes that explain everything in detail that I would be glad to share with you. I am also working on a proposal of ideas that I have about how to establish our library as a premiere culture center for the arts and humanites.

I also need to meet with you briefly about something that Rebecca Davis, director of Pascagoula's Main St. program, called me about today(Wed., August 4th).(It is hush, hush right now but a hint is -that is it about an award we are getting).

Have a great day!

Two men victims of drowning

Pascagoula man missing 2 weeks is found in river

Accidental drowning took the lives of two men over the weekend, one at Pascagoula the other at Ocean Springs.

In the Ocean Springs mishap Friday, Charlie Lee Marsh, 22, Biloxi, lost his life when he dove from the L&N railroad bridge in an effort to retrieve a wallet which had been dropped into the water by his brother.

At Pascagoula the body of Louis Torres, 44, was found floating in the river at the foot of Dupont Avenue about noon Saturday. He had been missing 12 days.

Chief deputy sheriff Harold Jones said Marsh and his brother Theodore were fishing off the L&N bridge about 60 yards from the Ocean Springs shore when the two stepped to a platform to let a maintenance car pass.

Theodore Marsh, 28, accidentally dropped his wallet. Jones quoted Theodore as saying his brother dove into the water, came to the surface and tried out he "couldn't make it."

Theodore dove in in an effort to save Charlie Lee but told police he weakened so that he lost his grip and Charlie Lee disappeared beneath the water.

The body was recovered with an artificial respiration about 45 minutes by the civil defense rescue unit in an unsuccessful effort to revive him.

He was pronounced dead by Dr. George F. Smith, Ocean Springs.

A coroner's jury at Ocean Springs City Hall Friday afternoon returned a verdict of accidental drowning. The body was taken to a Biloxi funeral home.

Jones said Theodore Marsh lived in Alabama, had recently been discharged from the Army.

Schools, Beat Five to receive $10,310 in forestry funds

Jackson County has received $10,310 as its portion of $727,999 paid the state treasurer by the US forestry service for distribution among 31 counties which contain national forest acreage.

Payment is based on 25% of gross receipts from national forest lands during the past fiscal year. County schools will receive $5,000 for road maintenance and operation. Beat Five road fund will get remainder, as the 19,205 acres of Desoto national forest land in the county are in that beat.

The payment set a new record, according to L. S. Newcomb, state supervisor of forests. It was based on total income of $2,911,039 derived from timber sales, grazing, power, mineral leases and other uses of the 1,131,000 acres of national forests in the state.

Biggest single county payment was $125,345 to Franklin and next was $86,003 to Perry.

10 are recognized as blood donors

Ten International Paper employees were recognized as gallon blood donors at a meeting Friday of the county Red Cross chapter directors.

Honored were Harold E. Akridge, Ubie A. Boone, John B. Davis, Marvin McLeod, Billy McArthur, Hudson Delmas, Victor Smith, Clyde Cunningham, J. D. Harris and Daniel F. Lindsey.

and was visiting his brother at Bronx.

The body of Torres was discovered by two unidentified fishermen, police said.

They said Torres often slept on fishing boats along the river front and apparently either fell into the water while boarding one or rolled from the deck during his sleep.

Funeral services for Torres were scheduled at 10 a.m. today from Falls Funeral Home Chapel, Pascagoula.

Mons. P. J. Carey of Our Lady of Victories Church will officiate. Burial will be in Macpelah Cemetery.

Torres, who was a boat machinist, is survived by three sons, Lewis, Ronald and Mack Torres, all of Mobile; his father Joseph M. Torres, New Orleans.

Three brothers, Bernard of Mobile, Joseph, Jr. of Georgetown, S. C., and Mack H. of Missouri, and a sister E. M. Kohls of Pine Bluff, Ark.

In his challenge mailed Tuesday to the Compliance Committee of the mini-convention, Reed charges that the state committee violated its own plans for "affirmative action" in not naming blacks to the 10 seats.

The national party has decreed that each state party must take "affirmative action" to insure that their conference delegations truly represent the minority groups, both male and female, young and old, organized labor, and other factions.

In the 10 districts set up for choosing conference delegates, only one black was elected, giving Alabama three blacks in a 30-member delegation, not counting the alternates.

Reed tells the Compliance Committee that percentage of blacks is not even close to the black percentage in Alabama's delegation to the party's national convention in 1972 when the state had 10 blacks out of a delegation of 35.

Reed said after the Oct. 28 meeting that he would challenge the delegates.

He is asking the Compliance Committee to find that the Alabama affirmative action plan failed to insure the "meaningful representation" of blacks in the Democratic party, that it violated its own affirmative action plan by failing to elect blacks to the at-large seats.

He also asks the committee to refuse to seat the Alabama delegation "until it has complied with its own commitment regarding the at-large delegates."

Baptists adopt record budget

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—The Mississippi Baptist Convention will operate with a record $8.85 million budget next year.

The state's largest, religious group, holding its 139th annual meeting this week, adopted the budget Wednesday. It included a record $6.8 million dollar co-operative program budget. The cooperative program is its main channel of mission giving.

Delegates also voted to proceed with construction at the denomination's Gulfshore Baptist Assembly and adopted a resolution that a special committee be named to study of a proposal for a retirement home at Pass Christian.

The delegates also approved a $1.5 million capital needs allocation for the four convention-owned colleges during 1978-80.

Octogenarian Torres recalls horse-drawn pumper

By ARTHUR SMITH

Octogenarian Vincent Torres was the youngest of the nine children of the late Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Torres, and is the only surviving member of that family of three daughters and six sons. Now nearing age 83, he resides in retirement with his wife, the former Maye Esther Havens of Vancleave, at 119 Dantzler St. in Moss Point in a home that he built very much with his own hands and the help of a friend, Jordan Rollins, a skilled ship carpenter of McInnes Bayou.

Torres retired in 1958 after 45 years as a beater engineer at International Paper Co. and during most of that time he was the unpaid chief operating and maintenance engineer of Moss Point's early fire engines. He is still a member of the Volunteer Fire Company, and recalls having tinkered with the first horse-drawn pumper, and some better equipment that followed until the company became professionalized and modern.

Torres' father and brothers were members of Moss Point's closely knit but never formally organized steam tug boat fraternity, and he is the only one who didn't become a master or an engineer. When diesel-powered craft began to appear on the river they pushed the saucy, wood-fired steam tugs into obscurity and nostalgic memories. Their work was mostly on the river where the sawmills were located, and they nudged and pushed cargo schooners from dock to dock, and went upstream regularly to tow down pens and rafts of logs to the many storage lakes of the mills. The logs were cut from virgin pines growing on lands drained by the Pascagoula River.

These were the smaller tugs that rarely chuffed out of the Escatawpa River and upstream on the Pascagoula. Larger and more powerful tugs met incoming schooners at Horn Island Pass and moored them at sawmill docks or left them at anchor in Middle Fleet south of the island. They also towed lumber-laden barges to the fleet (there have been as many as 30 anchored there) in the early decades of this century and to ships docked at Gulfport. This latter irritated compliers of Pascagoula Port statistics because the export tonnage was credited to Gulfport and not to the Port of Pascagoula.

Antonio Torres, the paternal head of the Torres family, was a native of Spain. After graduating from the University of Barcelona, he emigrated to this country, living for a while in New York and then New Orleans, where 10 years later he married the former Isabel Gavigne in 1870. The family moved to Moss Point and lived in a house facing Torres Street and running back to Denny Lake where the children grew up. Capt. Torres was master of the tugs Albert B., Gladys, and others.

In time the three girls married and moved away, but five of the boys followed their father on the river. Tony, the eldest, was longtime master of the seagoing tugs Laura and Bessie H. Louis was engineer on the Eva; Joseph was on the Laura and Kimball, also sea-going, as engineer; John and Miguel had similar jobs on the big Eras Dantzler and the smaller Rosalie. The latter was primarily a river tug, owned by Capt. W. P. Dalley, onetime a city alderman.

The smaller tugs which shunted schooners and lumber barges around the river and brought down logs, usually tied up at wharves stretching from the site of Moss Point's present city hall to the curve of the road opposite the Old Robinson mill site. The seagoing tugs usually tied up at Dantzler's mill or more often in Scranton. Captains of these powerful boats somehow knew when a steamer or schooner would appear off Horn Island Pass, and would steam out there for the competitive job of towing one in. Sometimes the tugs drifted for that the Victor was the fastest and the Pic the smallest, and that the Pic carried a powerful pump and dropped her tow wherever to rush to a sawmill or lumber pile on fire.

When the sawmill industry began to wane and diesel-powered tugs operated ports, some of the Torres men were on board as officers. At least two signed up on cargo steamers. Joseph was an engineer on a tanker that evaded submarine patrols during World War II. Miguel, the last to die, was captain on a Mississippi River passenger ferry boat.

The river tugs carried a crew of three — captain, engineer and a fireman. The latter, usually a black man, doubled as a deck hand, and the more experienced could stand watch in the engine room, whenever the engineer wanted to snooze on the fantail during the slow towing of rafted logs. Foremen always reported early to get up steam for the tug to shove off for the day which usually ended in the afternoon.

The big seagoing tugs carried a larger crew including a mate and a second engineer for their frequent intercoastal voyages. Officers' quarters were on the second deck behind the pilot house, and firemen and deck hands remained below. There was a galley, equipped with a Shipmate stove of pleasant memory, on which a cook prepared filling and tasty meals. Torres was told by his brothers.

Vincent recalled other members of the tug boat fraternity who were identified with river and community life when Moss Point knew the whine of more than a dozen sawmills and planing mills and was the center of lumber manufacturing and exporting of states of the Gulf. There were Capt. Henry Coulson of the Victor, and his brother Tucker, engineer on the Pic. Tucker later boarded a seagoing cargo freighter as chief engineer. Also the Martin brothers, Henry and Douglas, and the Angelos, Joe and George, who were tugboat engineers and members of the Angelo family which built schooners and smaller craft at their yard on a site where the James Walker Marine yard now operates.

Others prominent in the fraternity were Capt. W. P. Dalley, owner of several small tugs; Capt. Nick Broadway, engineers Gordon Broome, Andrew Jackson and Henry Irving. The latter owned the Toller, the tug that pulled the first load of slabs to the mill of the Southern Paper Company for its first batch of pulp.

They were an independent and often frolicking group — those tug boat men. All had stood examinations and were licensed by a U. S. agency, and unlike most workers of the period, they were not beholden to the lumber interests or boat owners. Before Moss Point was incorporated as a city in 1901, they refused to work the roads or pay a commutation tax and that carried over into the city, until a mayor said the was no validity to their claim that they worked on waterways and not at all on streets.

Before Vincent Torres began helping IPOD to make paper, he was a clerk in the Moss Point post office. In high school he was the dependable baseball pitcher and afterwards he developed a vicious "drop" when he twirled against neighbor teams. Torres is possessed of a vivid memory and an abiding sense of humor. A friend recalls having received a letter from him in France while with Gen. John J. Pershing's Expeditionary Forces complaining of cooties (body lice). "I have millions scurrying around or a single one on a motorcycle," he wrote.

Mr. and Mrs. Torres are the parents of two sons. Glenn, a graduate of the University of Alabama and a chemist at the International Paper Co., was killed in an automobile accident in 1970. Charles, a graduate in engineering from the University of Mississippi, is employed at Ingalls. They have six grandchildren.

Blacks challenge seating

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Joe Reed, chairman of the predominantly black Alabama Democratic Conference, has filed a challenge to the seating of Alabama's delegation to the national Democratic party's "mini-convention" in Kansas City, Mo.

That convention meets Dec. 6-8 to draw up a new party charter.

Reed, a member of the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee, was joined in his challenge by Alvin Holmes, a close associate of the ADC and also a member of the state committee. They contest only those delegates selected Oct. 28 by the state committee.

At that time, the state party's ruling body chose three at-large delegates and seven alternate delegates. Of those three, two are black, and two alternates are black.

Pascagoula music competition will be a family affair

■ Twin brothers' family hails from Moss Point

By MARTIN BARTLETT

PASCAGOULA — Mississippi Gulf Coast Music Games will host its fourth annual show at 7 p.m. Tuesday at War Memorial Stadium.

Drum and bugle corps representing seven colleges from all over the nation will participate.

For at least some members of the "Spirit of JSU" from Jacksonville State University in Jacksonville, Ala., it will be something of a homecoming. Glenn and Graham Torres of Hoover, Ala., are no strangers to south Mississippi.

Their dad, Mark Torres, was born in Moss Point, so was his father and his father's father. In fact, the twin boys' grandfather graduated from Moss Point High School in 1972.

The twins' grandfather, Glenn, was born in Moss Point and graduated from Moss Point High School in 1941.

The Torres twins are students at Hoover High School outside of Birmingham.

While the "Spirit" is usually only made up of people 16-21 years old, the two, along with Colin Choat, all of Hoover High, were chosen to be a part of the performing group.

With daytime highs expected to soar into the 90s on Tuesday, competing bands won't need much help warming up the audience.

But Glenn Torres told the Birmingham News in an interview that it won't be the most inhospitable environment the "Spirit" has competed in.

"It's 100 and something degrees outside, and we're marching on blacktop pavement," he said. "It's tough, but it's worth it when we march our show, to see everybody's face light up and hear the cheers, it's worth it."

Tuesday's competition in Pascagoula is only one stop on a long journey for the group from Jacksonville State.

Other groups competing come from New Jersey, Ohio, South Carolina, Wyoming and Wisconsin.

Tickets range are $12 to $18 and can be purchased at www.gcmusicgames.org or by telephone at (228) 392-4093.

The show is co-hosted by the Pascagoula High School Band Boosters.

A clinic will be at the stadium 4 p.m. the day of the event and is free for all ticket holders.

'Mr. Vee Cee' Recalls 55 Years Of Fire History

By JAMES LANHAM

Vincent (Vee Cee) Torres, 74-year-old volunteer fireman of Moss Point, and an old fire alarm bell kept at the fire station have a lot in common — they both have been around when a lot of Jackson County history was made.

"Mr. Vee Cee," as he is known, has kept up with the modern innovations of his avocation since starting with the volunteer department some 55 years ago. But the old bell has been supplanted by a midget counterpart inside a kitchen telephone.

Mr. Vee Cee's term of service with the department dates back to 1910 when the first fire-fighting crew was organized in the city.

In those days, buckets and hand pumps comprised the large part of the department's fire fighting equipment. Through private subscription, donations from merchants, suppers and baseball games the firemen raised enough money to purchase a horse drawn pumper and several hundred feet of fire hose.

They had no horses, but had to borrow teams from various citizens who kept their animals stabled near city hall where the pumper was kept. Sometimes someone hitched the pumper to a car and pulled it to a fire.

After several years of baseball games, donations and suppers, however, the department was able to purchase mechanical power for transportation.

In 1914 Moss Point became the second city on the gulf coast (and perhaps in South Mississippi) to own a motorized fire-fighting unit. Gulfport had acquired a motor unit a year or two earlier.

That was the year the department acquired the alarm bell.

There is still some confusion as to how the department got the bell. Some citizens laughingly say it was stolen from a church. Others think the city fathers purchased the bell from a disgruntled deacon who wanted to recover his money he had donated to the congregation, but Mr. Vee Cee, who should know, says the bell is a donation from a member of the Ehlers family of Escatawpa.

The bell was first purchased near the end of the Civil War

OLDTIMERS — Vincent Torres, 55-year veteran of the Moss Point volunteer fire department, stands beside the old alarm bell that has served the department since 1914. Torres is the oldest active member of the department.

Activated in 1910, the department has grown from a horse-drawn pumper pulled by borrowed teams to one of the most modern and up-to-date organizations of its kind. (Chronicle Photo) by the Ehlers family who were the founders of a Lutheran Church in Escatawpa. Later, after older members of the family died and the young folks moved away, the bell was left hanging in its tower, the mighty clapper silenced by non-use. A descendant of the family, knowing of the urgent need for a fire alarm system in Moss Point, donated the item to the department.

Twice in his long career with the department the compelling tones from the fire bell have called Mr. Vee Cee to do service in disastrous flames that nearly destroyed Moss Point.

Once the flames were stopped by Jackson County's only brick building — built by the Stewart family to house the family's drug business. Later, the fire department was able to check the flames after more than half the business buildings in the city were destroyed by flames.

Those were the days before ample water systems gave firemen the edge on the enemy. Ponds, ditches and the river were the sources of water supply for fire fighting in those days.

The bell served the department well, Mr. Vee Cee reports, until sirens became the standard alert sound to tell of pending disaster. Later, another invention replaced the siren — the Bell Telephone warning system.

The system is used by the largest fire departments in the world. Chicago, New York, Los Angeles and other American cities capitalize on its efficiency.

The system works through the home phone of the fireman. When a fire call comes in (to the police department), the desk sergeant evacuates the system by lifting the special alarm phone, turning on a tape recorder and speaking the alarm message into the phone.

The system continues to ring the home phone of the fireman until it is answered, then the tape recorder speaks the message, giving location of the fire, type of blaze, and other necessary directions. If a subscriber's phone is in use, the phone sets up such a racket that the user would hang up the instrument even if he did not know what the signal meant.

This is just one of the modernizing steps taken by the volunteer firemen of Moss Point to keep the department up to date.

Four modern fire units are always on the ready in the station at Moss Point and at Kreole. Two of the vehicles are "triple combinations," that is, pumper, ladder and lifesaving. The other two are combination pumper and utility trucks.

Active members of the Moss Point volunteer fire department are T. F. Bennett, E. D. Blacklock, Hilburn Boutwell, Louis Bond, Joe E. Brown, Frank Hammond, Billy Roy Kelly, Elwood Lennep, Gary Lennep, M. P. Lewis, Harold Monroe, W. B. McDavid, Robert Parks, Bert Woods, Jack Wood, Henry Fagan, V. A. Torres, James Flowers, W. C. Rhodes.

Walter Lee Lander, Bill Hilton, Julius Redmond, Wayne Hawley, Harry Lane, John L. Rouse, William Stuart, C. G. Lovelace, Frank Florence, Bob Parks, Dwight Moody, William Humphrey, Rodney Miles, Larry Hollingsworth, Grady Lambert, W. S. Andrews, W. R. Stewart, Jim Pemberton, R. A. Bailus and E. C. Benefield.

Other volunteer fire departments in Jackson County include Fountainebleau, Ocean Springs, Latimer, D'Iberville, Vancleave, East Central, Big Point, Escatawpa and Orange Grove.

Kreole volunteer fire department has been made a part of the Moss Point unit since the area came into the city.
